Needs of the Learners Learning Chinese as a Foreign Language in Hong Kong

- ✍ LEE Siu Lun
- ☐ 1 November 1999
- ❖ CUHK Student Campus Work Scheme

This research focuses on the needs of the learners of Cantonese as a Foreign Language (CFL) in Hong Kong. Since the learners come from different countries and from different professions, the objectives are to understand learners' learning habit, objectives, expectations, resources available, etc. Questionnaires survey and one-to-one interviews are used. 70 questionnaires are sent to learners who are now learning CFL, 65 questionnaires returned. In the questionnaires, respondents are asked whether they like to participate in the interviews. Within the 38 who like to do the interview, 10 were selected. In the questionnaire and interview data, learners show a preference of using the target language in work domain and in private life. They also highlighted the situations where the use of the target language is preferable, which would help the development of teaching materials. The result of the needs analysis will be helpful in understanding the characteristics of the learners and for policy makers, curriculum planners, material designers, language teachers and those who are interested in the field.
